Class Clown

My father is a man weighed down by his very virtues. His life has passed in the thankless duties of local government; his voice hardly counted in the council chamber.

In our home, he exhausted himself in the settlement of local disputes. Without ambitions & without joy in private family life, like many a man who from year to year thus effaces himself more & more, he had come to put a fanatic application into minor matters to which he limited himself.

Experience had produced in my father a scepticism toward all mankind in which he included me, since childhood; any success from his son, would not impress him in the least; family pride was so strong that it would not have been admitted that I could add anything to it.

I was thirty one years old when this overburdened man left us.

My father not only knew how to shout, but also to humiliate, in my family home you had only one chance, to break, to be broken, or to be stronger than the father: mediocre instruction from one female teacher at primary school, exercised a tyranny over her pupils which would shame me to impose upon men, which taught me to enter into the thought of each man in turn, & to understand that each makes his own laws, thus, I was brought up in a British Colonial Regime which made me into a Anarchist Freedom Fighter / Agitator / Independence Rebel under the mask of 'Class Clown' to fight Imperial Tyranny of Church & State.
